Remain in the game

It's time for all Europeans to show brotherhood and solidarity with British citizens who want to remain in the European Union

Because Europe would not be complete without the genuine presence of the United Kingdom.

Because the roots of the EU lie in the memory of the tragedies of the twentieth century. The two world wars and the fight against totalitarianism in which the United Kingdom, with its historic democratic legacy, played an essential and decisive role.

Because a divorce between the EU and England, Wales, Northern Ireland and Scotland could very well reopen old tensions at the borders, fuelling terrifying nationalist passions, and resurrecting the ghosts of xenophobia against which the European Union was formed.

Because on the international stage stand Vladimir Putin, Xi Jinping and Donald Trump, who not only relish the thought of a divided Europe, but work daily for that outcome.

Because it must be known that the disintegration of the EU is a threat to all European countries and societies.

Everywhere, in stadiums, in the streets, from windows, we wave the European flag and reaffirm our desire to be together, and to change the Union from within to make it more democratic, more cohesive and more supportive!

we are stronger, safer and better off in."

Labour MP Jo Cox, in her last column, on 16 June, 2016
